Do you happen to know how many people in the San Fernando Valley are under gang injunction? There was a federal court ruling today that ends LA's enforcement of gang injunctions, and we are wondering how this would affect the Valley?

According to the ACLU, the court issued a preliminary holding that the city likely violated the Constitution by enforcing the injunctions without first giving accused individuals the chance to defend themselves.

Also, can you comment on the significance of the ruling?

Subject: Seeking immediate comment on development in gang injunction lawsuit

Afternoon:

I just got word that the ACLU won its motion in the gang injunction lawsuit, seeking to extend the preliminary injunction barring the city from enforcing injunctions (which it received for plaintiffs Peter Arellano and Jose Reza last year) to the rest of the certified class.

Unless I'm reading this wrong, I take this to mean the city is now barred from enforcing the remaining injunction orders it has against the approximately 1,600 people who were subject to past orders. As you know, the city attorney's office issued letters of removal to more than 7,000 people who were subject to injunctions last year.

Can you confirm this? And does the LAPD have any reaction to this?

Roll calls, community meetings, foot beats, stops by stations – that kind of stuff. We think this could help give readers a deeper sense of who Chief Beck is, beyond press conferences, Police Commission meetings and other more formal events that we typically cover.

If he's willing to let us observe some of these things, we'd like to start doing that between now and June so we all aren't scrambling to make it happen two weeks before he retires.

Hi Trish,

I submitted a PRA request awhile back for some information about how the LAPD handles evidence. There are a couple aspects that maybe you could help me with.

Discovery recently asked for some keywords to help find the email correspondence I requested.

If the LAPD is communicating with the District Attorney's Office about a case where the destruction of evidence is at issue, is there a point person who typically handles this? Including that person's name as a keyword would narrow the search.

Also, I asked for the LAPD policies about retention and destruction of evidence and haven't receive anything back. If there's anything you can quickly pull from the department manual or any other source, could you forward it? The exact language of the request is here:

"I am requesting a copy of the policy, training guidelines and any other procedures adopted by your department as it relates to the retention, storage and/or destruction of evidence in both open and closed investigations and unsolved cases, including, but not limited to, any documents explaining who is authorized to order the destruction of evidence in those cases."

Let me know if there's anything you can do to help. I realize this request is a bit obtuse, but we're trying to give it a scope that Discovery can handle.

Hi there,

I'm writing a story about the DA's decision in the shooting of Jesse Romero, and wondering what the current work status of the involved officer, Eden Medina, is. His serial number is 40914. The last time I checked, he was assigned to Hollenbeck.

If I could please get an update by the end of the day today, I'd really appreciate it. Thanks.

Hi Josh, hope you're having a good start to your Thursday.

In light of President Trump's comments about MS-13 last week – which, as you know, are only his latest comments about MS-13 – we want to do a story looking at where that gang stands in L.A. today. We're hoping to do a deeper dive, including numbers and interviews with LAPD folks who know the gang well, to show the history of MS-13 in L.A. and how it compares to its presence now. I think Thursday's interview with Chief Beck was a good jumping off point for this – now we want to take some time and really dig in.

I'm hoping you'll help facilitate an interview with this, maybe with Deputy Chief Eisenberg – because he's the head of detectives and used to work gangs in Rampart, I thought he might be a good place to start. If he's willing to do an interview, I'm hoping we can find some time early next week, or even tomorrow if he's free then. We'd like to get a jump on this story since it's especially timely now.

Thoughts? Feel free to call my cell if you have any questions.

James,

I am attempting to get you the interview you requested regarding the LAPD's enforcement of marijuana DUI's with the Subject Matter Expert. What is your availability the next couple of days?

Thank you for your patience,
Trish
